Employment & Workplace Training:

What is the difference between a Guide and Instructor when considering elective units or skill sets:

A guide will focus on leading an activity, while an instructor will focus on teaching others how to lead that activity independently. Obviously, it's important to be able to lead an activity successfully before teaching someone else how to do it, and for that reason we require our students to first gain adequate experience at guiding level in a particular activity before proceeding on to instructor level. We therefore understand some significant experience must support each qualification we issue. This is why all of our Guide and Instructor level qualifications include minimal workplace training hours to be completed prior certification.

Workplace Training:

Students studying Guide or Instructor level units or qualification, must meet workplace training requirements set by the academy and/ or the 3rd party training providers. This may consist of a set number of guided or assisted guided tours in your chosen activity, log booking a set number assistant instructing classes. This training is conducted alongside some of our industry partners in real life scenarios. This workplace training is volunteer work, but may lead to possible job opportunities and credible references to add to your resume.
